Added Value of Space

Social exclusion is most severe in rural and remote areas that typically suffer from a lack of local terrestrial infrastructures, limiting de-facto the availability and/or access to a wide range of social services. Space assets, such as satellite communication, satellite navigation, Earth observation, or human spaceflight, can bridge the social gap.

Apply Now!

The funding and support is offered in the frame of a Kick-start Activity of ESA's Integrated Applications Promotion programme.
